

Three peaks

Fitting in with our our and about theme this week, we're loving ethical jeweller Emma Aitchison's Three Peaks ring. Inspired by the peaks of Ben Nevis, Scafell Pike and Snowdonia, these three hard carved stacking rings are made from brass and silver. Available from natural living store, Chalk & Moss.

Call of nature

Bird & Wild coffee gives your caffeine kick an extra boost - 6% of sales go to help fund the RSPB. It's obviously Fairtrade and organic but also 'shade grown', meaning it's grown under rainforest canopy so the biodiverse land still nurtures bird and wildlife. It comes in medium roast and espresso strength.

Floral kick

British bodycare and fragrance Floral Street brand has committed to using plastic free packaging across its range. Its body lotion and wash comes in 100% compostable boxes and sugar cane tubes as it tries to bring down the 120 billion units of packaging produced every year by the global cosmetics industry. Smells good, does good - we're in.

Pack it up

Bottletop's cute mini backpacks are made from sustainably sourced leather and modified ring pulls, using artisans across South America, their traditional skills and a recycled plastic lining. The global initiative opened the first 3D printed store created by robots using up-cycled plastic in London at the end of last year and makes for a luxurious but ethical take on the accessories market.
